Contestation: Gentrification in San Francisco. Manuel Castells, Urban Poverty, Ethnic Minorities and Community Contestation: Gentrification in San Francisco. Castells argues that gentrification is a process of social displacement and cultural change that occurs in urban areas with significant levels of racial and ethnic diversity. The process is characterized by the displacement of lower-income residents and the replacement of their neighborhoods with more affluent ones. The process is also accompanied by the transformation of the city’s cultural landscape, as traditional cultural practices and institutions are replaced by those of the new residents. San Francisco is a city with a diverse population, and as such, it has experienced significant levels of gentrification in recent years.
